Summary of programme aims

The programme aims to provide students with a deeper knowledge and theoretical understanding of the academic discipline of International Relations than that provided at the undergraduate level. It seeks to acquaint them with the current debates in the field and their relationship to contemporary problems of world politics. It also aims to strengthen their ability for critical analysis of International Relations. It offers the opportunity for specialisation in various aspects of international politics, strategic studies, international political economy, international law, international organisations, and area studies.

Transferable skills

This module will enhance students' capacity for independent study by requiring them to prepare for weekly discussions using recommended bibliographic materials (print and electronic). It will help them to develop further their IT skills by using a variety of internet sites and public access databases in the preparation of assignments. It will enhance their presentational skills by requiring them to make oral presentations to groups of fellow students. It will strengthen their written communication skills through the writing of essays and a dissertation. The dissertation component will strengthen students' research skills and their ability to structure complex subject material as well as evaluate and present their own thinking on a subject in a coherent and precise manner. This module provides training for doctoral programmes as part of the ESRC 1 + 3 scheme.

Programme content

The MA in International Relations consists of 180 credits; a taught element (120 credits) and a dissertation (60 credits). There is a compulsory core module 'International Relations' (30 credits), which runs for two terms (Autumn and Spring). In addition, students choose module options totalling 90 credits from the list below [or one 30 credit option plus the full complement of research training (60 credits)], which run concurrently with the core module. Students may take up to 40 credits in another MA programme subject to the approval of the Director of GIPIS. Students must also write a dissertation (60 credits), which is planned in consultation with a supervisor and submitted for assessment in September.

Support for students and their learning

University support for students and their learning falls into two categories. Learning support includes IT Services, which has several hundred computers and the University Library, which across its three sites holds over a million volumes, subscribes to around 4,000 current periodicals, has a range of electronic sources of information and houses the Student Access to Independent Learning (S@IL) computer-based teaching and learning facilities. There are language laboratory facilities both for those students studying on a language degree and for those taking modules offered by the Institution-wide Language Programme. Student guidance and welfare support is provided by Programme Directors, the Careers Advisory Service, the University's Special Needs Advisor, Study Advisors, Hall Wardens and the Students' Union.

GIPIS has its own handbook as well as a full induction programme at the beginning of the university year. Student progress is monitored via termly progress reports written by the Unit Convenor and provided to the Director of Studies. Through its formative essays scheme GIPIS also gives individual help to students whose early assignments have revealed the need for remedial effort to enhance their writing skills.

Career prospects

Students with a postgraduate degree in International Relations may be able to pursue careers in a wide range of areas in government, business, research, journalism, publishing, teaching, and the work of non-governmental organizations. A number of students also go on to further post-graduate studies at the PhD level.

Opportunities for study abroad or for placements

The Graduate Institute has exchange arrangements with Charles University, Prague, and with the Université Libre de Bruxelles. Each year a weeklong study trip to Brussels is organised to visit EU and other governmental and non-governmental institutions.

Educational aims of the programme

Upon completion of the MA programme, students will have broadened and strengthened their knowledge and understanding of International Relations in a systematic way. They will be aware of the main epistemological and theoretical issues relevant to the academic study of International Relations, and of current debates within the discipline. They will have a general familiarisation with the full range of quantitative and qualitative research skills relevant to the study of International Relations and will have practical knowledge of specific methods and research techniques. They will have engaged in a sustained piece of independent and critical research within the context of close and supportive supervision. They will also have acquired non-subject specific research skills and generic skills and knowledge appropriate to a research and other careers.
