Summary of programme aims

This is a cross-disciplinary programme which aims to provide students with subject-specific knowledge of both International Relations and English. The joint degree seeks to impart knowledge of a variety of different kinds of literary texts, thereby providing a perspective on different methods of critical analysis. In International Relations, the programme aims to give students an appreciation of the normative, methodological and institutional issues involved in the study of this subfield of Politics and International Relations. The course also aims to foster an independent approach to formulating problems and arguments, using the systematic research, close reading and analytical skills that are fundamental to both disciplines.

Transferable skills

The University's Strategy for Teaching and Learning has identified a number of generic transferable skills which all students are expected to have developed by the end of their degree. In following this programme, students will have had the opportunity to develop their skills relating to career management, communication (both written and oral), information handling, problem-solving, team working and use of information technology.

International Relations and English are disciplines that lend themselves to critical judgement and problem-solving, both through personal engagement with issues and through dialogue and groups discussion. Students are encouraged to defend and to challenge established positions through the collection, collation and analysis of substantial quantities of material, the rigour of argument, and effective communication and presentation. The disciplines also prompt an awareness of numeracy through chronology, periodisation, and basic quantification. The programme develops students' familiarity with information technology in the production and presentation of their work and develops their skills in using computers for the location and retrieval of bibliographic and source material, accessing sophisticated databases and exploiting the internet.

In addition, students will develop a range of intellectual skills including the ability to synthesise, analyse and evaluate information and ideas; the ability to formulate independent arguments and to appraise and improve their own performance; and the ability to translate subject-specific knowledge and skills to new environments.

Programme content

Each Part of the degree programme comprises 120 credits. At Part 1, students are required to take 60 credits in the School of English and American Literature, and 40 credits in the Department of Politics and International Relations; the remaining 20 credits may be made up from modules available elsewhere in the University, as listed in the Faculty Part I Handbook. In Part 2, students must normally take 60 credits in both International Relations and English. In Part 3, students take 40 credits in each subject plus a compulsory 40-credit Joint Dissertation in English and International Relations. However, in consultation with their programme adviser, Part 2 and Part 3 students may choose to take up to 20 credits each year from modules elsewhere in the University.

Progression requirements

To proceed from Part 1 to Part 2, a Joint Honours student must obtain (i) an overall average of 40% over 120 credits taken in Part 1, where all the credits are at C level or above; (ii) a mark of at least 40% in each English module; (iii) a mark of at least 30% in individual modules amounting to not less than 100 credits taken in Part 1.

To proceed from Part 2 to Part 3, students must obtain (i) an overall average of 40% over 120 credits taken in Part 2; (ii) an average of 40% across English Part 2 modules; (iii) a mark of at least 30% in individual modules amounting to not less than 100 credits taken in Part 2.

Summary of teaching and assessment

In English, teaching is through seminars, lectures and essay tutorials. In Politics and International Relations, Part One modules and the compulsory Part Two modules involve both lectures and seminars. Part Two and Three optional modules typically place greater emphasis on seminars. In addition, the Joint Dissertation module is supported by workshops and individual supervisions in both departments.

In International Relations, all modules other than the Study of Politics and the Joint Dissertation are assessed by a mixture of coursework (25%) and examination (75%). Over the programme as a whole, assessment will be conducted through a mixture of assessed essays and formal examination. Conventions for degree classification are included in the Programme Handbook, but you should note that weighting between Part 2 and Part 3 for classification purposes is 33% and 67%.

The University's honours classification is as follows:

Mark	Interpretation
70% - 100%	First class
60% - 69%	Upper Second class
50% - 59%	Lower Second class
40% - 49%	Third class
35% - 39%	Below Honours Standard
0% - 34%	Fail

Admission requirements

A previous qualification in Politics is not required. Entrants to the Joint Degree programme are normally required to have obtained:

UCAS Tariff: either 300 points from three A2s, including 100 points (grade B) in English Literature or English Language and Literature; or 320 points from 3 A2s + up to two AS, including 100 points (grade B) in English Literature or English Language and Literature

Scottish Highers ABBBB or above (A in English Literature)

Irish Highers at least ABBBB (A in English Literature)

International Baccalaureate 31 points with 6 or 7 for Higher level English Literature

GCSE/O: English Language preferred, grade C or above.

All applications are considered on their individual merits. Mature candidates will be usually be expected to have a B (100 points) at A level English, or equivalent qualification, but consideration is also given to applicants with other qualifications and experience.

Admissions tutor: Mrs C Lyle

Support for students and their learning

University support for students and their learning falls into two categories. Student guidance and welfare support is provided by Personal Tutors, the Study Advice Team, the University's Special Needs Adviser, Hall Wardens, the Students' Union and the Careers Advisory Service. Learning support includes IT Services, which has several hundred computers, and the University Library, which across its three sites holds over a million volumes, subscribes to around 4000 current periodicals, has a range of electronic sources of information and houses the Learning Resource Centre with some 200 workstations. There are language laboratory facilities both for those students studying on a language degree and for those wishing to take modules offered by the Institution-wide Language Programme. Transferable skills are supported by the Skills Opportunities At Reading (SOAR) website with links to information about resources and events offered by the Library, IT Services, Study Advisers, RUSU, Mathematics Support Centre and the University Language Centre.

The School of English and American Literature also offers students specific help to improve and develop their essay writing skills through the Royal Literary Fund Fellowship scheme, which provides a resident professional writer whose role is to advise students individually, from first-year to postgraduate level, on raising the level of their academic writing.

Students of both English and Politics and International Relations receive Handbooks which give details of the Programme, guidance on study skills such as note-taking and essay writing, and information about staff, facilities, and sources of specialised help within the University, such as the Study Skills Advisor and the Counselling Service. The English programme is designed to give students extensive teaching support in Part 1 leading to more independent work in Part 3. The Politics and International Relations programme lays increasing emphasis on options and course work over the three years. Academic feedback and guidance is given through one-to-one essay tutorials, and academic and personal support is provided through the tutor system and the University's Personal and Academic Record (PAR) Scheme. Dissertation workshops prepare students for the Part 3 dissertation which is individually supervised. The Geoffrey Matthews Collection, housed in the School of English, provides books, xeroxed materials, cassettes and an extensive collection of videos for loan to students. A video-viewing suite is available within the Faculty. The Library is well stocked with printed materials as well as electronic databases, such as the OED, the MLA Bibliography, and JSTOR. Specialist subject librarians are available to give students advice and guidance to library resources. The Department of Politics provides additional support in the Study of Politics module in Part Two. There is also written feedback on essay work. In addition, Politics and International Relations students have access to a departmental Library, and a photocopier.

Career prospects

A Reading degree in English and International Relations provides graduates with a range of communication and analytical skills that stand them in good stead in the market place. In recent years graduates with qualifications in these subjects have gone into a wide variety of jobs, including teaching, publishing, journalism, the media, management, administration, and public relations. A sizeable minority follow careers in accountancy, banking or commerce, and the civil service; others have pursued interests in law. A number of graduates each year go on to further academic study and research. International Relations students also go into careers involving overseas appointments such as government organisations, including the armed forces, and in non-governmental organisations such as development charities and international businesses. A number of graduates each year go on to further academic study and research. In addition to the help provided by the University Careers Advisory Service, SEAL has a Careers Tutor available to advise students in English on researching and planning their career choices.

Educational aims of the programme

The aims of this joint degree programme are both intellectual and practical. In English, the aim is to develop students' knowledge and understanding of a wide variety of literary texts, and to promote an informed and self-reflective awareness of procedures of critical analysis. The International Relations component aims to develop students' knowledge and critical understanding of the international environment, and enable them to acquire appropriate study skills.

Skills and other attributes

B. Intellectual skills - able to:

1. Demonstrate the capacity for independent analysis and research
2. Identify problems and issues
3. Read closely and critically
4. Reflect on one's own positions
5. Analyse and critically deconstruct claims and arguments
6. Critically read, comprehend and evaluate a large range of texts
7. Negotiate both primary and secondary sources and be able to demonstrate how they inter-relate
8. Synthesise information from a range of sources, providing a coherent overview of positions in logical space
9. Analyse the logical construction of arguments
10. Produce and defend positions in response to critical pressure
11. Develop creative intelligence in independent research and interpretation
12. Think logically on political matters
13. Analyse issues of political life
14. Understand the evolving state of knowledge in the rapidly developing discipline of Politics and International Relations
15. Transfer appropriate knowledge from one area within the disciplines to another.

Teaching/learning methods and strategies

Intellectual skills in English are acquired through independent reading (1), seminar preparation and discussion, and essay writing (1, 2, 3) and essay feedback through tutorials (2, 3 and 4).

In Politics, the methods and strategies in the previous section are used, plus the facilitation of self-directed learning through the use of research-based teaching materials and methods, and logical exercises. Essay, portfolio, and dissertation preparation reinforce the research and analytical skills necessary to form and to validate arguments and judgements. The ability to think logically is essential to the understanding and analysis of the discipline. Analysis requires an appreciation of the issues and results in organisation of written work and oral presentations. Students are encouraged to link core and optional modules and also to use experience from modules in the Joint Dissertation.

Assessment

In English, 1 – 5 are assessed both formatively (in seminar discussion, coursework essays, essay feedback and tutorials) and summatively, in essays, unseen exams and the Joint Dissertation.

In Politics and International Relations, assessment of 6 – 15 is carried on through coursework, written unseen examinations, seminar presentations, and discussion in supervisor-led small groups and seminars.

C. Practical skills: able to

1. Criticize and formulate interpretations of texts
2. Engage in critical argument using relevant theoretical approaches
3. Recognise the rhetorical resources of the English language
4. Exercise bibliographical and research skills
5. Deploy appropriate conventions in the presentation of written work
6. Relate the study of English to cultural and social issues
7. Develop and carry out individual research programmes and strategies
8. Gather, organise, and deploy evidence, data and information from a variety of primary and secondary sources
9. Locate and synthesise large quantities of material
10. Present a coherent talk delivered from notes
11. Produce concise and accurate written reports
12. Critically discuss particular issues and arguments, and engage in discussion of each other's responses as well as articulate their own
13. Utilise problem-solving skills
14. Manage their own learning self-critically, reflect upon it, and seek and make use of feedback.

Teaching/learning methods and strategies

1 – 3 and 6 are developed in English seminars, essays and essay tutorials. 4 and 5 are developed through essays, essay feedback and dissertation guidance and supervision.

In Politics and International Relations, these skills are developed through lectures, supervised small group discussions, seminar groups with a facilitator, oral presentations and, especially in Part Three, independent learning.

Feedback on an individual basis combined with the University's personal tutor system encourages constructive self-criticism.

Assessment

In English, all the subject-specific practical skills are assessed through formative and summative essays. 1 – 3 and 6 are also tested in unseen examinations. In Politics and International Relations, assessment of 7-14 is carried on through coursework, written unseen examinations and seminar presentations.

D. Transferable skills – able to:

1. Communicate fluently and effectively with a wide range of individuals using a wide range of means, including written and oral communication
2. Formulate and present arguments
3. Assess the merits of competing approaches
4. Translate subject-specific knowledge and skills into other environments
5. Find and use relevant information resources
6. Demonstrate time-management skills and prioritise workloads
7. Work independently, demonstrating initiative and self-organisation
8. Develop a creative approach to problem-solving in a variety of theoretical and more practical situations
9. Self-evaluate and self-reflect, with recognition of the steps required for improvement
10. Use information technology, especially word-processing, e-mail and the internet for the retrieval and presentation of information, including statistical or numerical data;
11. Analyse data
12. Exercise group and interpersonal skills
13. Develop vocational awareness with a view to planning a career.

Teaching/learning methods and strategies

The skills are developed through seminar discussions, seminar presentations, essay writing, tutorial feedback and unseen examinations. 4 and 7 particularly are developed through requiring students to draw on acquired knowledge and skills when analysing new material in essays and unseen examinations. 5 and 10 are developed through use of the library and other sources of information for seminar preparation, essay writing, and research for the joint dissertation.

Most of these skills are embedded in all Politics and International Relations modules. The development of IT skills occurs throughout the programme and is especially apparent in modules where there is a research component.

Independent learning is also developed throughout but becomes particularly important in Part Three of the programme. Vocational awareness is promoted especially by the CMS module.

Assessment

All the itemized skills are formatively assessed through coursework essays and seminar presentations, and summatively assessed through essays, unseen examinations, portfolios of work and the Joint Dissertation.

Please note - This specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the programme and the learning outcomes that a typical student might reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if he/she takes full advantage of the learning opportunities that are provided. More detailed information on the learning outcomes, content and teaching, learning and assessment methods of each module can be found in the module description and in the programme handbook. The University reserves the right to modify this specification in unforeseen circumstances, or where the process of academic development and feedback from students, quality assurance processes or external sources, such as professional bodies, requires a change to be made. In such circumstances, a revised specification will be issued.
