Faculty:	Social Sciences Faculty
Programme length:	3 years
Date of specification:	20/Aug/2010
Programme Director:	Ms Simone Austin-Jones
Programme Advisor:
Board of Studies:	Law
Accreditation:	The Law Society; General Council of the Bar; individual modules may be acceptable for accreditation by other professional bodies Please note that the School of Law intends that the LLB will be a qualifying law degree (QLD) for all students. However, all other aspects of the degree programme may be subject to change where such change is educationally desirable or practically necessary.

Summary of programme aims

In addition to the imparting of legal knowledge, this degree programme encourages the ability to delineate and evaluate issues, select relevant materials and produce arguments encompassing policy, existing practice and knowledge, and including theorising and critiquing legal concepts and the law itself.

The overarching aim of this course is to provide a programme of legal study which affords a conceptual framework for the study of law which will facilitate the recognition and appreciation by students of the overall mosaic of public and private law and permits detailed study of some aspects of law. The degree aims to provide coverage of the core areas of English law while also providing a range of options which allows students to bias their studies in particular directions.

Transferable skills

During the course of their studies at Reading, all students will be expected to enhance their academic and personal transferable skills in line with the University's Strategy for Learning and Teaching. In following this programme, students will have had the opportunity to develop such skills, in particular relating to communication, interpersonal skills, learning skills, numeracy, self-management, use of IT and problem-solving and will have been encouraged to further develop and enhance the full set of skills through a variety of opportunities available outside their curriculum.

Students are required to engage with progressively more technical and intellectually demanding material. Many modules require them to demonstrate their knowledge and understanding by providing, orally or in writing, an answer to a practical legal problem. This involves identifying the legal issues, the relevant facts, the principles and the authorities applicable (using directed or undirected research) to provide a solution. In some cases this requires both individual effort and teamwork (as in the modules in Legal Skills and Constitutional and Administrative Law). Such solutions must be effectively communicated and defended in language appropriate to the audience. This happens throughout the degree programme via submission of written work, tutorial and seminar participation and presentations. Reflective learning is facilitated by prompt and apt feedback to written work and presentations, and generic feedback via Blackboard to written work and Part 1 and 2 examinations. Students are required to initiate a Personal Development Portfolio in Part 1 and, at meetings with personal tutors throughout their programme, they are encouraged to reflect upon their transferrable skills, identify deficiencies and take timely and constructive steps to improve their profile.

Programme content

Students studying on this programme will normally spend Part 1 and Part 2 at Taylor's University College, Malaysia. Students who successfully complete Part 2 will transfer to the University of Reading to study Part 3. Students who successfully complete Part 1 may, with the prior approval of the Head of School, transfer to the University of Reading to study Parts 2 and 3.

Students are required to take 120 credits in each part of the degree programme. In all Parts there are compulsory and optional modules. Career Management Skills Career management skills, equivalent to 5 credits, are taught pervasively within the 360 credits in Parts 1, 2 and 3.

A student may opt to take modules comprising 20 credits from the range of modules offered at I or H level by other Schools and departments elsewhere in the University, or a module in a language new to them offered at Level 4 by the Institution-Wide Language Programme (IWLP), where the entry requirements for that chosen module are met. Students should note that in order to obtain a qualifying law degree one option studied and passed in either Part 2 or Part 3 must be the module in European law, Foundations of EU Law.

Progression requirements

In order to proceed from Part 1 to Part 2 of the LLB (Law) degree a student must obtain a pass in Legal Skills plus a mark of at least 40% in all remaining Law modules: and achieve an overall average of 40% across all credits for which a numerical mark is awarded.

In order to proceed from Part 2 to Part 3 of the LLB (Law) degree a student must:

obtain at least 40% in all modules taken in Part 2.

achieve an average of 40% in 120 credits taken in the examination.

For classification purposes, part 2 contributes to one third of the final assessment and Part 3 to the remaining two thirds.

Summary of teaching and assessment

Teaching methods vary from module to module and include lectures, tutorials, tutor- and student-led seminars, supervised independent research and on-line learning opportunities. Assessment also varies according to the desired learning outcomes and includes a combination of seen and unseen examinations, written coursework, longer research projects, and individual and group presentations. Formative assessments in core modules offer students an opportunity to practise and receive feedback on the skills required for the summative assessments.

Admission requirements

Entrants to this programme are normally required to have obtained: UCAS: Grades CCD from any 3 A level examinations (not including General Studies) or equivalent. In addition, IELTS Band 6.5 (or equivalent) will be required. All applicants are considered on their individual merits and the School may vary these requirements if it sees fit. Applicants wishing to make any enquiries should contact the Admissions Tutor for the programme at Taylor's University College.

Support for students and their learning

University support for students and their learning falls into two categories. Learning support includes IT Services, which has several hundred computers, and the University Library, which across its three sites holds over a million volumes, subscribes to around 4,000 current periodicals, has a range of electronic sources of information and houses the Student Access to Independent Learning (S@il) computer-based teaching and learning facilities. There are language laboratory facilities both for those students studying on a language degree and for those taking modules offered by the Institution-wide Language Programme. Student guidance and welfare support is provided by Personal Tutors, School Senior Tutors, the Students' Union, the Medical Practice and the Student Services Directorate. The Student Services Directorate is housed in the Carrington Building and includes the Careers Advisory Service, the Disability Advisory Service, Accommodation Advisory Team, Student Financial Support, Counselling and Study Advisors. Student Services has a Helpdesk available for enquiries made in person or online (www.risisweb.reading.ac.uk), or by calling the central enquiry number on (0118) 378 5555. Students can get key information and guidance from the team of Helpdesk Advisers, or make an appointment with a specialist adviser; Student Services also offer drop-in sessions on everything from accommodation to finance. The Carrington Building is open between 8:30 and 17:30 Monday to Thursday (17:00 Friday and during vacation periods). Further information can be found in the Student website (www.reading.ac.uk/student).

At Taylor's University College Taylor's University College students are able to use several hundred computers in six computer laboratories which are open until 9.00 pm from Monday to Friday, and also on Saturday. In addition, they are able to access the College's facilities by lap-top computer through a number of connections placed around the campus. The College has a dedicated IT Support Centre. The College's Library holds relevant textbooks and journals, as well as providing access to on-line publications. It is open from 7.30 am to 9.00 pm from Monday to Friday, and also on Saturday. Students studying on the LLB Law at Taylor's University College will have full access to the 'Westlaw' legal database. Students studying at Taylor's University College will be allocated a Personal Tutor based at the College, who will provide guidance and welfare support. The College has an English Language Centre, which gives tailored support for particular programmes, including an 'English for Law' course which will be compulsory for all students studying on this programme. At the University of Reading Within the School of Law, personal and academic tutors will provide help and guidance on academic, and where appropriate, other matters. A member of the academic staff of the School acts as a Careers Advisor and the School has a Director of Studies, a Senior Tutor and a Student Support Advisor to provide student support. A member of the Reading teaching staff will have particular responsibility for students from Taylor's University College. In addition, all students receive a detailed handbook to help them study Law successfully.

Career prospects

While very many law graduates take professional exams in law and go on to practise law either in the UK or abroad, many others pursue alternative careers. A law degree develops skills which are in great demand outside the legal field. Those interested in alternative professions may choose to pursue training as, for example, an accountant, a patent agent or company secretary. Recent graduates have become commodity traders, stockbrokers and bankers (including joining the Bank of England) as well as entering general management. We have graduates working in computing and publishing, running their own businesses (including one fashion designer) and journalism. The civil service and other branches of public service attract others.

Opportunities for study abroad or for placements appropriate, by online support. Optional modules may be taught by lectures and tutorials or seminars. All tutorials and seminars allow a student to gauge his/her progress in that module and may require significant student input into the acquisition and dissemination of knowledge. The critical input into learning is provided by a student's own reading and preparation for group discussions (particularly engagement with primary sources). Compulsory modules will normally use formative assessed work.

Assessment

Knowledge and understanding is assessed through end of year formal examinations in all compulsory modules except Legal Skills, where there is assessment throughout the module and Writing Skills. Optional modules adopt a variety of assessment methods but an end of year unseen, timed exam is a component in almost all modules.

Teaching/learning methods and strategies

Logic, analytical skill and the ability to apply relevant knowledge is inherent in the study of law and these skills are encouraged and developed in tutorials, seminars and formative assessed work.

Assessment

Both formal examinations and summative assessed work assess all these skills either directly or indirectly.

Teaching/learning methods and strategies

All the practical skills are present in each part of the degree and are developed through tutorials and seminars as well as formative essays. The essence of legal study is to provide an answer to a practical legal problem having identified the legal issues, selected relevant facts and used appropriate law to provide a solution. The encouragement of these faculties is inherent in all parts of the degree. All modules seek to develop powers of critical analysis and judgement.

Assessment

1 and 4 (other than oral arguments) are directly assessed through formal examinations (examinations indirectly assess 2 and 3). Writing Skills and Credit require elements of 2-4 and may require a solution to a practical legal problem. Some modules assess (formatively or summatively) teamworking and oral communication.

Teaching/learning methods and strategies

Law is a subject of considerable complexity; some material is difficult and not all of it is of over-

- 2.Solve practical problems;
- 3.Work individually or as part of a team;
- 4.Use different types of information sources/
- 5.Communicate technical material, which in some modules will include numerical information, effectively both orally and in writing; and
- 6.Construct defensible arguments and exercise critical judgement;
- 7.Reflect critically on one's own learning.
- 8.Consider career development.

powering interest – a student must work hard to engage with such material. Many subjects require a student to provide an answer to a practical legal problem having identified the legal issues, selected relevant facts and used appropriate law, which may involve directed or undirected research, to provide a solution. Having sought a solution, which may involve group work as well as individual effort, a student must be able to defend his or her conclusions and communicate it in appropriate language to an audience. Tutorials and seminars, formative essay work, presentations and teamwork encourage and develop these skills during the degree programme.

Assessment

Both formal examinations and summative assessed work assess all these skills (oral skills are assessed only in some modules). Personal Tutorial meetings encourage student to reflect on his or her own learning and career plans.

Please note - This specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the programme and the learning outcomes that a typical student might reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if he/she takes full advantage of the learning opportunities that are provided. More detailed information on the learning outcomes, content and teaching, learning and assessment methods of each module can be found in the module description and in the programme handbook. The University reserves the right to modify this specification in unforeseen circumstances, or where the process of academic development and feedback from students, quality assurance process or external sources, such as professional bodies, requires a change to be made. In such circumstances, a revised specification will be issued.
