Summary of programme aims

The programme aims to provide students with a deeper knowledge and theoretical understanding of the academic discipline of International Relations than that provided at the undergraduate level. It seeks to acquaint them with the current debates in the field and their relationship to contemporary problems of world politics. It also aims to strengthen their ability for critical analysis of International Relations. It offers the opportunity for specialisation in various aspects of international politics, strategic studies, international political economy, international law, international organisations, and area studies.

Transferable skills

The programme develops students' capacity for independent study and research, critical analysis, effective organisation and presentation of ideas orally and in writing, and the use of IT. Requirements include weekly reading assignments to prepare for seminar discussions, oral presentations to fellow students and participation in seminar debates, and the preparation of essays and a dissertation. These tasks require students to select and assess materials on assigned topics (using both the internet and the library); organise and distil the essence of large amounts of information on contested issues; evaluate the information and grasp the different sides of an argument, develop an independent view, and support it effectively in both written assignments and oral presentations.

Programme content

The MA in International Relations consists of 180 credits; a taught element (120 credits) and a dissertation (60 credits). There are two core modules 'International Relations' (30 credits) and 'Conflict and Conflict Resolution' (30 credits) which runs for two terms (Autumn and Spring). In addition, students choose module options totalling 60 credits from the list below [of which only 20 credits can be research modules (*)]. Students may take up to 30 credits in another MA programme subject to the approval of the Director of GIPIS. Students must also write a dissertation (60 credits), which is planned in consultation with a supervisor and submitted for assessment in September.

Support for students and their learning

University support for students and their learning falls into two categories. Learning support is provided by a wide array of services across the University, including: the University Library, the Student Employment, Experience and Careers Centre (SEEC), In-sessional English Support Programme, the Study Advice and Mathematics Support Centre teams, IT Services and the Student Access to Independent Learning (S@il) computer-based teaching and learning facilities. There are language laboratory facilities both for those students studying on a language degree and for those taking modules offered by the Institution-wide Language Programme. Student guidance and welfare support is provided by Personal Tutors, School Senior Tutors, the Students' Union, the Medical Practice and advisers in the Student Services Centre. The Student Services Centre is housed in the Carrington Building and offers advice on accommodation, careers, disability, finance, and wellbeing. Students can get key information and guidance from the team of Helpdesk Advisers, or make an appointment with a specialist adviser; Student Services also offer drop-in sessions and runs workshops and seminars on a range of topics. For more information see www.reading.ac.uk/student

Career prospects

Students with a postgraduate degree in International Relations may be able to pursue careers in a wide range of areas in government, business, research, journalism, publishing, teaching, and the work of non-governmental organizations. A number of students also go on to further post-graduate studies at the PhD level.

Opportunities for study abroad or for placements

The Graduate Institute has exchange arrangements with Charles University, Prague, and with the Université Libre de Bruxelles. Each year a weeklong study trip to Brussels is organised to visit EU and other governmental and non-governmental institutions.

Programme Outcomes

Knowledge and Understanding

A. Knowledge and understanding of:

1. the principal concepts and theories associated with the academic discipline of International Relations;
2. the major issues and debates in contemporary world politics and the relevance of International Relations theory to these questions;
3. specific aspects of International Relations;
4. research methods

Teaching/learning methods and strategies

Students will be taught by means of seminars with students presentations and structured discussion, individual tutorials, and a limited number of lectures. In the Core module students will become familiar with the key concepts and theories of International Relations and with the major issues and debates. In the Option modules, students will gain specialised knowledge of different aspects of International Relations, including international politics, strategic studies, international political economy, international law and international organisations. In the Research Methods module, students will become familiar with the full range of quantitative and qualitative research skills and underlying issues, train in a range of methods of data collection and analysis, and acquire an understanding of the main epistemological and theoretical issues in the social sciences. In the Dissertation module, students will, under the guidance of dissertation supervisor, apply appropriate methods of analysis to a specific topic, taking increasing responsibility for their own learning.

Assessment

Students' knowledge is tested through a combination of coursework, examinations and a dissertation.

Skills and other attributes

B. Intellectual skills - able to:

1. analyse and interpret patterns and processes of world politics in a theoretically aware manner;
2. identify and employ relevant scholarly literature in support of one's own research;

Teaching/learning methods and strategies

These skills are taught by means of seminars with students presentations and structured discussions, some individual tutorials, essay writing, workshops and the writing of a dissertation. Additional training is available to students through study visits to the library and other research resources, and through the support of Study Advisors.

Assessment

The transferable skills developed during the course form an integral part of knowledge and intellectual skill acquisition and are assessed throughout the programme in coursework, exams and the writing of the dissertation.

Please note - This specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the programme and the learning outcomes that a typical student might reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if he/she takes full advantage of the learning opportunities that are provided. More detailed information on the learning outcomes, content and teaching, learning and assessment methods of each module can be found in the module description and in the programme handbook. The University reserves the right to modify this specification in unforeseen circumstances, or where the process of academic development and feedback from students, quality assurance process or external sources, such as professional bodies, requires a change to be made. In such circumstances, a revised specification will be issued.
