Programme information and content

In French Studies the programme aims to provide you with the ability to understand native-spoken French within an educated French environment and to communicate orally with fluency and accuracy, to read with understanding, critical judgement and evaluation a range of specialist and non-specialist cultural, factual and other texts and to write accurately in French with an appropriate understanding of register and style. The programme emphasises student-centred learning, intensifying the learning experience through small group teaching and a range of opportunities to engage in projects and workshops. The culture studies modules are informed by staff research specialisms and designed to develop your intellectual skills and to critically apply literary and historical concepts, analyse and interpret a range of cultural texts, develop and demonstrate independence of thought and sensitivity to cultural difference.

Studying a Modern Language opens a variety of career paths. These include careers in business and marketing, publishing, international organisations, teaching and translation. The degree will equip you with a range of transferable skills, including structuring ideas and communicating them effectively, participating effectively in groups and team work, working independently, retrieving, structuring and presenting information, time management, responsibility as well as adaptability and self-reliance.

In English Language the programme aims to provide you with a thorough degree-level education in English Language, with special emphasis upon the use of the English language in its social context, and upon the application of knowledge about language to problem solving in the contemporary world. It is distinctive in situating theories and descriptions developed in linguistics within an interdisciplinary and applied perspective. It also aims to produce graduates who are competent communicators in English, who have a sound critical understanding of English language and English-speaking culture, and who have acquired a range of skills to underpin their life-long development and enhance their employability. The programme aims to enable students to achieve well-balanced understanding of the language, culture and society of a foreign country either through study at an overseas university or through a work placement.

Part 1:	In French Studies Part 1 develops your practical language skills in your core language module in all four areas (speaking, writing, reading, listening). You will also have the opportunity to understand and apply key

	terms in the structural analysis of language. The culture studies modules provide you with a sound understanding of key issues and developments in French and European history and culture. In English Language Part 1 provides the basic resources for the description of the sounds, grammar and semantics of English. It also provides a broad overview of the scope of English Language and introduces a sociolinguistic and psycholinguistic perspective to the study of language. It also equips students with various skills necessary for university level work, for instance effective verbal communication and academic writing, analytical and research skills, information handling, time management and IT.
Part 2:	In French Studies Part 2 further develops your practical language skills in your core language module in all four areas (speaking, writing, reading, listening), building on the work done in Part 1. The cultural studies module provide you with an opportunity to encounter and critically engage with a range of material in the target language, such as films, literature, essays and historical documents, enhancing your ability to apply a range of analytical concepts as well as approaches to the critical analysis of this material. In English Language Part 2 provides further grounding in core skills in analysing language, and adds to this theory and practice in sociolinguistics and training in research methods. A variety of optional modules allow students to pursue more specialised areas of enquiry from interdisciplinary perspectives and include language teaching, language development, language and the media, literacy, and language in society and culture. Modules also encourage the development of transferable skills such as team working, giving oral presentations, critical thinking, negotiating and so on.
Placement/Study abroad year:	The Placement or Study Abroad will give you the opportunity to apply and enhance your practical language skills in either a work or study environment, or a combination of both. You will further develop your adaptability and self-reliance as well as your sensitivity to cultural difference.
Part 3:	In French Studies Part 3 gives you the opportunity to build up on your existing language skills, refining your use of more complicated structures as well as variation in register and style. The cultural studies modules will give you an opportunity to engage deeply and critically with topics based on staff research specialisms and to apply concepts and approaches for critical analysis to an increased amount of material in the target language. In English Language Part 3 gives you the opportunity to conduct supervised, independent research on a specialised topic for the Dissertation and will receive support and advice from their supervisor on a one-to-one basis. There is again a suite of optional modules on more specialised topics at a more in-depth and advanced level that enable students to enhance their critical, analytical and transferable skills.
