Programme information and content

The purpose of the course is to prepare graduates from appropriate disciplines (e.g. biological, agricultural, geographical or environmental sciences) for employment in a variety of entomological related careers or to continue to PhD. The course is highly focussed, providing you with the practical and analytical skills to realise your potential and to discover where your talent lies in the multidisciplinary field of entomology, giving you an understanding of the issues relevant to the pursuit of a career in entomology.

Programme Learning Outcomes

-MSc by Research Entomology (full-time)

During the course of the Programme, you will have the opportunity to develop a range of skills, knowledge and attributes (known as learning outcomes) For this programme, these are:

	Learning outcomes
1	Utilise a range of approaches to present insects for scientific study and preservation
2	Use keys to identify a wide variety of insect groups and explain the rationale relating to the use of identification keys
3	Explain and critically evaluate the various techniques available to collect insects
4	Explain and critically evaluate the use of insects in scientific research
5	Explain and critically evaluate analytical techniques available to investigate entomological data sets
6	Effectively apply a range of analytical procedures for scientific study
7	Design and carry out entomological research, and effectively communicate regarding entomological research in a range of formats (including written and verbal communication)

You will be expected to engage in learning activities to achieve these Programme learning outcomes. Assessment of your modules will reflect these learning outcomes and test how far you have met the requirements for your degree.

To pass the Programme, you will be required to meet the progression or accreditation and award criteria set out below.

Module information

The programme comprises 180 credits, allocated across a range of compulsory and optional modules as shown below. Compulsory modules are listed.

Optional modules

The optional modules available can vary from year to year. An indicative list of the range of optional modules for your programme can be found online in the Course Catalogue. Details of optional modules for each part, including any additional costs associated with the optional modules, will be made available to you prior to the beginning of the Part in which they are to be taken and you will be given an opportunity to express interest in the optional modules that you would like to take. Entry to optional modules will be at the discretion of the University and subject to availability and may be subject to pre-requisites, such as completion of another module. Although the University tries to ensure you are able to take the optional modules in which you have expressed interest this cannot be guaranteed.

Teaching and learning delivery

Highly practical learning methods are deployed throughout. All learning will take place in the laboratory, field (on campus or other field sites), or institutional visits (e.g. British Museum of Natural History, London). All seminars take place in the laboratory. In addition, students will receive feedback on work and one-to-one advice.

The scheduled teaching and learning activity hours and amount of technology enhanced learning activity for your programme will depend upon your module combination. In addition, you will undertake some self-scheduled teaching and learning activities, designed by and/or involving staff, which give some flexibility for you to choose when to complete them. You will also be expected to undertake guided independent study. Information about module study hours including contact hours and the amount of independent study which a student is normally expected to undertake for a module is indicated in the relevant module description. Elements of your programme will be enhanced via digital technology.
